Welcome address in behalf of Program is to be constructive there must be education. People must be welcome intensely useful and helpful advice to the pupils. He showed them in a vivid manner that certainly made a lasting impression on their minds that there are seven great reasons for going to school, namely: To be benefited financially, spiritually, economically, physically, socially, intellectually and personally.

Judge Brunson illustrated the benefits of education with a jar Judge Brunson illustrated the benefits of education with a jar containing some rice, pop corn, large corn and scuppernongs. He named the rice people who only go through the first grade, the pop corn those who stop at the sixth grade, the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn these who is the conference, dealing with work done by different grade the large corn the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn those who stop at the sixth grade the large corn the sixth grade the properties and Haldane Strain and Madge ployment and general economic depression will not have the food necessary to maintain health. NINTH INSTALLMENT

When Peter went out for a look around town she hurried away with her share of the wedding presents in search of a pawn-shop, where she left them securely lock, ead away from danger of theft or loss, and stopped for an express money order on her way home. There wasn't enough money for the suit but she bought a new, frilly collar and cuff set to brighten up the old one which she extravagntly sent down to the koted electric iron and a folding bard in her big suitcase, but she felt some hesitancy about resorting to such an economy with Peter in the sitting-room.
